Forecast For Highland & Eilean Siar
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Thursday 30 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Showers frequent and heavy at first. Seasonally mild.

Today:
Showers frequent and heavy through the morning, particularly in the west, potentially bringing some thunder. Turning drier and brighter for the afternoon. West to southwest winds strong across the Western coasts and Isles. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud thickening from the south through the evening, with a band of occasionally heavy rain extending as far north as Skye and Inverness come dawn. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Friday:
Rain from Inverness to Skye southwards at first, occasionally turning heavy. This clears south during the morning with brighter spells building through the afternoon. Continuing seasonally mild. Winds light. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Saturday mild, but not feeling so in brisk winds that bring showers or longer periods of rain. Sunshine, showers for Sunday. Rain then showers Monday, these perhaps wintry later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.